

When Do We Belong?

Acknowledgments

I want to especially thank the artist Sanam Muradi for her contribution to the writing, framing, and capturing of pictures. Thanks for being an inspiration for many of the pieces. Ms.Honeywell for teaching me all I know about photography. Mayor Amáda for being an awesome mentor. Shelley for letting me use the space. My family for supporting me in everything I've wanted to do.

Fabricio Orellana

For this set of pictures, I wanted to show what belonging looks like in life. When I first arrived in the US five years ago, I didn't feel like I belonged anywhere, whether at school or outside.

After discovering the magic of photography and how it can capture moments, I started capturing moments of belonging in the world—people, animals, and even objects. Over time, as I constantly searched for a sense of belonging, I realized it was already in my life. I just needed a different perspective to see it. After this realization, I started to capture those moments of belonging in my life.

Community is the most common way of belonging. In those places, we show our true selves and stop acting because we are now in our place where we don't feel judge.

Belonging And Place

The Pathway to my Home

Fabricio Orellana

$35

The magic of photography is to make “common” places as the pathway to home seem magical. If you capture something at the right angle, time, and lightning, it will seem out of a fairy tale.

Unity in Light

Fabricio Orellana

$35

Belonging is everywhere when you look for it. Have you ever heard the term unity is strength? Every little light adds to the overall sense of belonging in the picture.

This is true to most things like unity in family or a group of friends.

I asked her how she felt when the dog approached her. She deeply missed her dog Bedit, who had passed away. She said:
“Anelo to see you again, anelo to touch you again, anelo to smell you again, anelo for those days of happiness with you, Bedit.”

And for a Moment I Lost Myself

Fabricio Orellana
Not For Sale

Have you ever played a G chord while the wind blows your face? That's when all those hidden feelings want to come out in the form of music. Sounds that are telling us something. Listen carefully.
